FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1915

Giving President Wilson's policies unstinted support is proof positive of neutrality.

A United States dollar is worth $1.02 in London. Most Americans will prefer to spend their dollars at home and accept one hundred cents for them.

More than fifty new industries have located in Cleveland since the first of the year. No wonder the city is growing like a weed.

That man Holt did a good job for himself and the state of New York when he snuffed out his own life. His career of crime will be more quickly forgotten.

Although county officers will not be nominated for more than a year, candidates are already numerous and they are not a bit backward about taking the voters into their confidence and letting them know it.

Notwithstanding the fact that certain of the five districts out of the 22 of the state so generously left to the democrats in the Willis gerrymander make five more democratic, it does not appear likely that there will be lack of support for referendum even there. Democratic congressmen who selfishly view the situation and endeavor to profit themselves at the expense of the support of a president like Wilson will probably involve themselves in suspicion that may defeat the ends they seek. Republican voters who believe in fair play and who oppose the self-seeking of ambitious politicians, as well as the many independent voters, are offering their support of the referendum which would defeat the unfair gerrymander the Willis legislature tried to place on the state.

SALEM

The Buckeye Engine Co. has received an order for 23 engines and that plant will soon be the busy plant it was in its most palmy days. The sale of the Cowgill greenhouses is still being litigated. Joseph Bonnell originally owned the property and same was not paid for according to contract. It was sold recently to close the matter but litigation has prevented confirmation of the sale.

The salary of Albert Hayes, clerk of the city board of education, has been increased from $400 to $600 a year, the raise being justified by the increased amount of work to do.

During the month of June Mayor Johnson collected $117 in fines. The number of arrests for the month was above the average.

Carnivals are barred from Salem. Parties were here from Niles this week to secure a license but Mayor Johnson turned them down. Street carnivals do a town no good, that is a clinch.

The cost of taking care of the city's affairs the last half of this year will approximate $39,000.

Postmaster Gee's salary will remain unchanged the coming year, the receipts of the office justifying neither a decrease nor increase in pay.

About $2000 of the $6000 necessary to secure the German Home has been raised.

Monday was a quiet Fourth in this city. Hundreds went to the Country Club, Damascus and other places.

Rollin Schwartz of this city has been granted a certificate to practice medicine.

Word comes from New Waterford that a fine vein of thick coal has been struck in the big shaft.

Mrs. Anna Dickinson, aged 85, died Monday in the hospital where she was taken more than two weeks ago after falling down stairs and breaking one of her legs.

SEEK EXTENSION OF OFFICE TERMS

County Officers Organize in Columbus and Launch State-Wide Movement.

WILL PUT CAUSE BEFORE THE VOTERS

To Place Upon November Ballot Amendment to Constitution That Will Give the Officials Four Years Instead of Two.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

Columbus, July 8.—Interest in public things is being diverted, at least momentarily, here by the unique effort of county officials from all parts of Ohio to extend their terms from two to four years. The county officers have just succeeded in forming an organization and launching a state-wide movement to place upon the November ballot an amendment to the Ohio constitution that will give all last year's successful candidates for county office a term of four years instead of two years. The same amendment will have the effect, if adopted by the people, of extending the terms of probate judges throughout the state from four to six years. But in order to be assured a place on the ballot the amendment must be petitioned for by 110,000 voters and the signatures of this number of voters must be gotten between now and Aug. 1. Many observers here doubt the possibility of getting such a number, but the new association of county officials, having natural branches in every county of the state, seem to be optimistic of the outcome. The general agitation for an extension of terms for county officials have been under way for several years past. One of the grounds has been the citation that the terms of these officials begin and end at such different times that the situation becomes awkward and confusing. Numerous efforts have been made in general assemblies in recent years to bring about the term extension by statute. Such an effort was made in the late session of the 81st assembly but failed to get beyond the first stages. Always the argument that officials elected for a given term should not be given a further tenure has prevailed. But now comes the county officials with a new argument. They hold that since 51 per cent of the voters of the state are required to adopt a constitutional amendment, that percentage of people should have the right to extend the terms of any officers just as they would have the right to select the same officers over again. Therefore, according to this argument, if the amendment is adopted the county officials will have had the equivalent of a re-election. Influential in the launching of the amendment movement are the county auditors. Their argument is that their increased burden of tax duties, imposed by the Parrott-Whittemore bill, will make it impossible for them next year to find time to fight for their re-election. The auditors, who were elected last fall, do not take office until this fall but will be up for reelection a year hence.

Take Orders From Subordinate.

Gov. Willis took orders from one of his subordinates the other day. This happened at Grove City, near Columbus, where the chief executive made the Independence day address. The Old Guard of Columbus, noted organization of Civil war veterans, attended the celebration and acted as the governor's escort. The commander of the Old Guard is Capt. William H. Miller, who is superintendent of the state house and grounds. While waiting for the arrival of the governor the Old Guard elected him an honorary member. When informed of this the governor said, "By Heck, if I'm a member, I'm going to march," and he did, shouldering a gun and falling in at the rear. To the tune of the life and drum corps he marched with the veterans to the town square, where the meeting was held. As a member of the organization he obeyed the order of Capt. Miller, the commanding officer.

MONKEY'S LIGHTNING MOVES.

No One As Yet Has Been Able To Catch A Picture of Him.

If there is an amateur photographer in Philadelphia who thinks he can photograph a monkey and would like to try it there is a splendid chance waiting for him at the Zoo.

Since July, 1906, when he was brought to the zoo, the white gibbon, a beautiful specimen of the simian tribe, has been the pet of the Philadelphia public. He has been the subject of many a picture, but everything has failed up to date, even with a camera speeded up to a thousandth of a second.

A monkey that could escape the shutter on a camera of that kind must be a lightning actor. Whether any professional attempts have been made to get a likeness of this wonderful specimen of the ape is not on record. But it is certain that no one as yet has caught a picture of him. The trial is open to all comers.

As a probable marvel probably nothing in the world can approach him. The reason why he has never been photographed is not because the camera is not quick enough, but because no one is quick enough with the camera. Before the lens can be focused on him and snapped he's gone like a flash.

He is the quickest thing that has ever been seen in the zoo. He is hardly ever still the hundredth part of a minute. How any one ever managed to catch him is a mystery. There is only one other ape of the species in captivity and that is in the London Zoo. The London gibbon has been photographed successfully, but no one has yet accomplished the feat with the one in Philadelphia. The job is open to any one who would like to make a record.

Porcelain Supplants Silver.

Silver Service Becoming Rare, Even On Tables of the Wealthy.

A distinguished Londoner who has just visited America notes the absence here of silver services on the tables, even of the wealthy, except on rare and formal occasions. Porcelain or China has become the fashion for the hostess.

The White House has six silver tea services, some of the exquisite fluted design and others of the massive style of Colonial times. Yet Mrs. Taft used a pretty yellow service of a famous Japanese porcelain, on which golden dragons, dwarf trees and Oriental birds fly about in a pale amber sky. Her kettle was hammered brass, also from Japan, resting on a stool of teakwood. Cups, plates, all are of the same porcelain, and the only silver articles to be seen were spoons designed after the severe Elizabethan period. A yellow silk cover is used instead of the usual linen.

Chamois leather is not the hide of the chamois, but the flesh side of sheepskin.

THE LOST ANTELOPE.

Agnes Herbert Tells of Restoring a Tiny Creature to Its Mother.

A native hunter in Somaliland brought in a baby antelope to the camp of two English women. He told them that the mother was alive and unharmed; that he had ridden them down until the little oryx exhausted, had to drop, and the mother fled on. In "Two Dinass in Somaliland," Agnes Herbert tells of restoring the tiny creature to its mother. The hunter had declared that it was taken back to the place whence it came the doe would assuredly find it.

"We decided to try this, but to secrete ourselves, and cover the baby back with our protecting rifles. Otherwise it was quite likely that a lion or leopard would make off with it ere its mother could retrieve it. I took the timorous creature across my saddle—it seemed all struggling legs and arms—and made for the place, some two miles off, where he first started the oryx.

"We set the baby down alone, so fragile and small it looked, and then hid ourselves in a great thorn-brake. The little oryx did not wander far. Sometimes it bleated a little treble; once or twice it lay down, tucking its long legs beneath it, to rise and wander, all lonely, among the low thorn bushes. Two hours or more we waited, and then a gentle whinny, and almost before we realized it a perfect oryx doe cantered toward her joy expressed itself in every imaginable way. It was a beautiful and pathetic sight. We made some movement, and all alert again, the graceful creature sailed away, the baby trotting beside her. To think that in all the jungle a mother could find her way to the lost best-loved, with nothing to guide her, nothing to tell her!"

WORKING BACKWARD.

Japanese Methods Quite Different From Those of Any Other Nation.

A Japanese house is built quite differently from an English one. The roof, which with us is the last important part of the outward structure to be completed, is with the Japanese the first thing to be finished. All the tools used by the carpenters and joiners have a reversed action. The Japanese carpenter does not push a plane away from him, but pulls it toward him. The girdles are arranged in the opposite way from ours; the saws are made so as to cut on the upward pull and not on the downward thrust; screws have their threads reversed, and keyholes are always made upward and the keys turned backward. In the house, if the clock is an old one, it will have stationary hands, with the face revolving backward and the hours marked 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, and so on, reckoning onward from noon.
